[This Robin Hood was a famous Robber, and storied to be an expert Archer in the Time of Richard the First, about the Year 1200; his principal Haunt was about Sherwood Forest in Nottinghamshire.] This Proverb is applicable to all ignorant Pretenders and Braggadochie's whatsoever either in Knowledge, or Business. It intimates, that *Bragg*ing and *Boast*ing are common Impertinencies in Conversation, equally among Travellers and Soldiers, as well as Poets and Painters, who never out did Nature yet, but only in the Lyc. But they who pretend themselves to be what they are not, will always be prating of what they do not know. So Non omnes qui Citharam tenent, Citharedæ sunt, say the Latius; πολλοὶ μὲν καὶ ἀκροποροὶ παῦροι δὲ τὰ σαυτοὶ, the Greeks; and Molti parlan di Orlando, chi non videro, mai suo brando, the Italians.

Robin Hood's Dennyworth.

This Proverb is usually applied to such as having gotten any thing dishonestly, sell it at a Price much below the Value, according to the Proverb, Lightly come, lightly go; and Robin Hood is alluded to, because being an expert Archer, and so coming easily by it, it, he could afford to sell Venison as cheap as Neck-beef; according to the Latins, Aurea pro Æreis, and the Greeks, χρυσία χαλασίον. But others, on the contrary, apply it to such as would buy lumping Pennyworths, still alluding to Robin, but upon another Consideration, viz. his being a Robber; who, tho' as Cambden calls him, Prædonem mitissimum, the most gentle and generous of Thieves, when Cash run low, would have what he wanted at his own Rate, which his Chapmen were forced to take, or else he would have it for nothing.

This Proverb is usually applied to such Persons who, for Want of Penetration into the Consequences of Things, and of the Qualification of knowing Men, are often prevailed on, by the Artifices of designing Persons, to do those Things, which will in the Consequence sensibly affect themselves, while they design them only for others, deeming themselves secure: As also such revengeful Spirits, who prosecute their private resentments against others with such an unwary Precipiteness, that the heaviest Part of the Punishment frequently falls to their Share. Οὐτ' αὐτῷ κἀκὰ τιυχὴν ἀνὴρ, ἀλλὰ τιυχὼν, say the Greeks; and Ἐπὶ σιαυτῷ τὴν σιάνην κἀκὺς, In tuum ipsius caput lunam deducis, Latin.

This Proverb is not only levelled at a careless Groom, but has a more extended Aim; it intimates, that it is mighty Imprudence to neglect the weighing of all the Circumstances of an Action, both as to Time and Place, before we venture upon doing what perhaps we may repent of in the Event, to our great Shame and Damage. This is generally the Wisdom of the World, when the Thing is over, as we are as wise as Experience can make us. Almost all the Miscarriages of Mankind are for want of Thinking: After-Wit is commonly dear bought, and we pay for it either with Misfortune, Anxiety, or Sorrow; for there is no unthinking a Misfortune, after it has befallen us for want of Precaution and Foresight; an After-thought may enhance our Trouble, but cannot relieve our Distress; it may prevent like Inconvenience for the future, but it cannot make any Satisfaction for what is past. Serrar la Stalla quando s'han perduti buoi, say the Italians. Il est tems de fermer l'Étable quand les Chevaux en sont allez, the French. Quando quidem accepto claudenda est janua damno, the Latins. One Man had better steal a Horse, than another look over the Hedge.

This Proverb does not justify stealing at all; it means very honestly, and is only a smart Turn upon all partial Proceedings, as well in private Judgment as publick Trials. It intimates, that when great Rogues are in Authority, and have the Laws against Oppression and Robbery in their own Hands, little Thieves only go to Pot for it; and that inferior Pirates are punished with Death at the Gallows, while great Offenders live safe and secure under the Helm of Government. This proverb is for doing all People Justice alike, from the highest to the lowest, and in all Cases whatsoever, either of Desert or Demerit. We live indeed in a thieving, cheating, and plundering Age; Cozening is become a topping Trade, only we have got a genteeler way of stealing now than only to take a Man's Horse from under him on the Highway, and a little loose Money out of the Pocket; our Rapparees are Men of better Breeding and Fashion, and scorn to play at such small Game, they sweep away a noble Estate with one slight Brush, and bid both the Gallows and Horse-Pond Defiance; and the Mob is not always just in this Point, for one Pickpocket deserves a Horse-pond as well as another, without any regard to Quality or fine Cloaths. But, Dit venium Corvis, vexat Genjura Columbas, say the Latins.

He steals a Goose and gives the Giblets in Alms.

This Proverb points at such Persons, who, by Acts of Injustice, Oppression, and Fraud, amass to themselves large Estates, and think to atone for their Rapine by doing some charitable Acts while they are alive, or when they can no longer possess them, by leaving their Lands in Mortmain to pious and charitable Uses, as building and endowing Hospitals, Alms-houses, and other Acts of Beneficence (commendable indeed, when done from a truly Christian Charity) but they who think by thus paying Paul, to atone for their robbing Peter, entertain an Opinion highly disparaging the Justice of the Almighty. Parallel to this in the Hebrew Adage.

YOUNG'ER [geongen, Sax. Jonger, Belg. Junger, Teut. Junior, L.] more young.

The younger Brother the better Gentleman.

Though this Proverb contradicts their Notions, who think such Persons only the best Gentlemen who had the largest Estates, and it being the Custom of England for the eldest Son to go away with the whole Patrimony, it may to them seem a Paradox; but as it is grounded on a different Notion, so there have been, and are plentiful Instances to confirm the Truth of it: for while the Elder Brother of a House, depending upon his Estate, is either indulged by Parents, or gives up himself to an indolent Humour, so that his Soul in his Body, like a Sword in the Scabbard, rusts for want of Use, thinking it sufficient, if he have only the Accomplishments of a Fox-Hunter, or a Country Justice; the Younger Brother, being put to his Shifts, having no Inheritance to depend upon, by plying to his Studies hard at home, and accomplishing himself by Travels abroad, oftentimes, either by Arts or Arms, raises himself to a conspicuous Pitch of Honour, and so becomes much the better Gentleman; for it is Manners makes a Man, which was the usual Motto of William of Wickham, Bishop of Winchester, Founder of the College there, and New College at Oxford, inscribed on the Places of his Founding.

ZEUXIS an ancient Grecian Painter, who lived about 400 Years before our Saviour, and brought Painting, but then in its Infancy, to a great Perfection. He growing very rich, would at last sell none of his Works, but gave them away, saying, He did not know how to set a Price upon them equal to their Value. He painted a Bunch of Grapes so to the Life, that the Birds came and peck'd them; and afterwards having painted a Boy holding a Bunch of Grapes, which the Birds also flew to and peck'd, he was angry, and ingenuously confessed that his Work was not compleat, in that if he had drawn the Boy as well as he had done the Grapes, the Birds would have been afraid of him. And having disputed with Parrhasius, which was the best Painter, Parrhasius painted a Curtain so ingeniously, that Zeuxis taking it for a real one which hid the Antagonist's Work, desired it might be drawn, that he might see what he had done; but coming to know his Mistake, he acknowledged he was outdone, since himself had deceived none but Birds, but Parrha- sius had deceived even the Master of the Art itself.

The Sun goes about this Circle once every Year, and the Moon once a Month, and in the Middle of it is the Ecliptick Line, from which the Sun never departs; but the Moon and Planets wander up and down for the Space of eight Degrees, and sometimes more in both.

ZO'DIACK of the Comets, Mr Cassini hath observed a certain Tract in the Heavens, within whose Bounds (by many Observations) he hath found most Comets, but not all to keep; this he makes as broad as the other Zodiack, and marks it with Signs or Constellations like that, which are Antinous, Pegasus, Andromeda, Taurus, Orion, the lesser Dog, Hydra, the Centaur, Scorpion, and Sagittary.
